PROJECTS

Asoap (React/Redux, Rails 5, HTML/CSS)

live | github

A full-stack, e-commerce website clone of Aesop.com

- Applied filter functionality by altering the slice of state of product items on the frontend for refined searching.
- Optimized image rendering via Amazon Web Services which saved memory storage space and allowed for convenient multiple photo uploads.
- Integrated custom search algorithm using one of React's lifecycle methods to mount all products on the page and search products based on name, category, sub-category, texture, and aroma.
- Administered shopping cart CRUD features using Active Record which is only accessible for users who are logged in.

WeHaul (Group Project) (Mongoose, MongoDB, Express, React, Node.js, HTML, Sass)

live | github

A web application that allows users to request haulers with various sized vehicles close by on short notice

- Enabled Mapbox for visual navigation and clear directions and Google Maps Place Autocomplete to auto-fill pickup and delivery address.
- Created ratings feature using Express on the backend and styling it with React star rating package to allow users to rate a hauler.
- Implemented separate dashboards for users and haulers. Users can access a current job request, the status of the job, and the hauler's information, while haulers can access all the jobs, their details, and the map of the address.

Type Away (Javascript, HTML/CSS)

live | github

A type-based game that tests a user's capabilities in type accuracy and speed

- Incorporated animation properties and OOP to provide users with an appealing display during gameplay to test their typing capabilities of speed and accuracy.
- Designed start and game over screen modals and music features using event listeners to enhance user experience and real-time gaming.
